the most important and difficult task of the marketing manager is to determine the objectives of the firm's sales force. The sales force must be organized to meet the firm's sales objectives. The marketing manager must decide what kind of sales organization is best suited to the firm's needs. He must also decide how many salesmen are needed and what kind of compensation plan will be most effective. The marketing manager must also decide what kind of training program is best suited to the firm's needs. He must also decide what kind of supervision is best suited to the firm's needs.
