Statement of Work for the Development of a National Registry of Hereditary Deafness

Background: Deafness is the most common sensory deficit in the United States. It affects approximately 1 in 2,000 newborns. Hereditary deafness is a genetic condition that can be passed from parent to child. The National Center for Human Gene Research is conducting a study to identify the genes that cause hereditary deafness. This study will involve the collection of DNA samples from deaf individuals and their families. The information obtained from this study will be used to develop diagnostic tests and to identify potential carriers of the deafness gene.

The purpose of this contract is to develop a national registry of hereditary deafness. The registry will consist of a database of DNA samples from deaf individuals and their families. The database will be used to identify the genes that cause hereditary deafness. The registry will be maintained by the National Center for Human Gene Research.

The tasks to be performed under this contract are as follows:

1. Develop a protocol for the collection of DNA samples from deaf individuals and their families.
2. Develop a protocol for the analysis of DNA samples.
3. Develop a protocol for the maintenance of the registry.
4. Develop a protocol for the dissemination of information from the registry.

The contract is for a period of 24 months. The work is to be performed on a full-time basis.

The contract is for a fixed fee of $2,700,000.00.

The contract is subject to the terms and conditions set forth in the contract documents.
