This class I consider most interesting because it requires us to apply our knowledge of capital allocation to resolution of disputes between investors who have different views about the best way to invest their money.

As a consequence, it is important to understand the relationship between the different types of information and how they can be used together to support decision-making. This requires a clear understanding of the strengths and limitations of each type of information, as well as how they can be integrated effectively. It also requires a clear understanding of the context in which the information is being used, as well as the specific needs and objectives of the users. By doing so, it is possible to make more informed decisions and take advantage of the full potential of the available information.
