A portion of it was taken and placed in a glass jar, and a small amount of water was added to it. After a few moments, the water became cloudy, and a small amount of sediment settled at the bottom of the jar. This sediment was collected and examined, and was found to consist of a fine, granular material, which appeared to be composed of small, rounded particles. The water in the jar was then poured off, and the jar was rinsed with a small amount of water. The sediment was then washed off the sides of the jar, and a small amount of water was added to it again.
