Based on the above analysis, it can be inferred that the main reason for the decline in the number of registered companies in the city is the strict control of the government over the registration of companies, which has led to a significant reduction in the number of new companies registered each year. The first step in the process of developing a new product is to identify the target market and determine the product's unique selling proposition (USP). This involves conducting market research to understand consumer needs and preferences, as well as identifying competitors and their strengths and weaknesses. Once the target market and USP are defined, the next step is to develop a marketing plan that includes setting goals, creating a budget, and selecting appropriate marketing channels. The marketing plan should also include a strategy for launching the product and maintaining its market position over time.
